

Bush Gives Jim Peek at Spy Biz

By PAUL HEALY

Plains, Ga. — President-elect Carter and Vice President-elect Mondale received yesterday their first briefing since the election from Geroge Bush, director of the Central Intelligence Agency. Carter also made public the names of 11 private citizens who are helping him find and evaluate candidates for the top posts in his administration.

Bush flew from Washington to Albany, Ga., and was driven 40 miles to Plains by David Aaron, Carter's transition liaison man to the National Security Council and the intelligence community, and Jim Johnson, liaison for Mondale.

Press Secretary Jody Powell called the session at Carter's home "the first major over-all, theme-setting intelligence briefing" for Carter as President-elect. Powell explained that Carter does not receive a daily intelligence briefing, "but the information is available as events develop which we or the intelligence community believe he should be aware of."

Carter's talent-hunting advisory panel includes four women — Lucy W. Benson, former president of the National League of Women Voters; Carol Foreman, executive director of the Consumer Federation of America; Marian Wright Edelman, executive director of the Children's Defense Fund; and Patricia Harris, former United States ambassador to Luxembourg, dean of the Harvard Law School and a committee chairman at the 1972 Democratic National Convention.

Two other panel members are businessmen, Owen Cooper, past president of the Mississippi Chemical Co., Yazoo City, Miss., and former president of the Southern Baptist Convention, and Irving Shapiro, chairman of the board of duPont.

The other advisers are the Rev. Theodore M. Hesburgh, president of Notre Dame University; Lane Kirkland, secretary-treasurer of the AFL-CIO; Vernon Jordan, executive director of the National Urban League; Hank Lacayo, chairman of the Carter-Mondale campaign's Hispanic Advisory Committee, and National Democratic Chairman Robert Strauss.